SOME PRESS OPINIONS.

'We commend this book to the particular attention of teachers of geography.'—School World.

'It is an attractive volume, well set out, clearly arranged, and nicely printed, with an abundance of good half-tone illustrations, while the subject is treated in interesting fashion and with due—though rare—regard to the humanistic element. We would commend this book cordially.'—Guardian.

'This series of Geographies—Regional Geography—deserves to be well known. The information is full, useful, and very interesting.'—Head Teacher.

'We strongly advise teachers to examine for themselves this ably-written series.'—Bookman.

'This little book is welcome. . . . Throughout the book there is a strong endeavour to get back to principles, and to teach reasons rather than "facts." It should be of great use to teachers seeking guidance in the handling of the subject.'—Geographical Teacher.

'Altogether it is an excellent piece of work, and will do much to set the study of geography in the right way.'—Journal of Education.

'A most beautiful book. It would be difficult to praise it too highly.'—Secondary Education.

'The method of the book marks an immense advance on that of the skeleton texts inflicted upon us in our school-days. The attractiveness of the book, as well as its educational value, is greatly increased by the illustrations.'—Public School Magazine.

'The letterpress is brightly written, and the little student will enjoy his first imaginary trip round the world.'—Educational News.

'A book written on scientific lines. . . . A successful attempt to familiarize youngsters with the human aspect of geography, and the seventy illustrations, plus the numerous exercises, are admirably fitted for this purpose.'—School World.
